Secondly, the fact that you have nowhere near any idea the dB of your current clip frustrates the hell outta me - or maybe you do, but then that information is very well hidden away.. And yes, it would be, if certain features of the program wasn't complete bullcrap, like, whenever you wanna move the time- stamp and accidentally think you can drag it instead of just clicking where you want it, you'll create a loop, and frustratingly audio will only play within that loop.

have to agree.. Also the fact that whenever you hit space, the usual pause- button in almost every frigging editing program, instead of pausing your clip, it stops it, is one of the worst pieces of bullcrap of a feature I've ever seen.. Luckily, I remembered there was a program named Audacity - so I googled it and downloaded it from this very page.. r";V["cMu"]="Dat";V["HDG"]="
